Disney
FROZEN
Family Game Night
A Disney
STORYBOOK

© & ℗ 2021 Disney Enterprises, Inc. All rights reserved. Published by Disney Press, an imprint of Bue
No part of this book may be reproduced or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic or mech photocopying, recording, or by an information storage and retrieval system, without written permission
For information address Disney Press, 1200 Grand Central Avenue, Glendale, California 91201.

ISBN 978-1-368-07787-3

For more Disney Press fun, visit www.disneybooks.com

Disney

FROZEN

Family Game Night

Disney PRESS

Written by Suzanne Francis
Illustrated by the Disney Storybook Art Team

The castle bell rang over Arendelle as the sun began to set. Anna, Elsa, Kristoff, and Olaf had been looking forward to hearing that lovely sound all day!

Life had been very busy, but there was one thing they always made time for—family game night! Tonight was sure to be another fun-filled evening.

The friends gathered inside the castle, and Olaf immediately launched into a game of charades.

"I'll go first," he said. In a flash, the snowman rearranged himself so he looked like a pig.

"How about we try a different game tonight?" said Anna.

Olaf looked confused.

"We have been playing charades a lot lately," said Anna gently.

"And your ability to rearrange . . ." Elsa paused, struggling to find the right words as Olaf rearranged once again.

"You are very good," Anna finished.

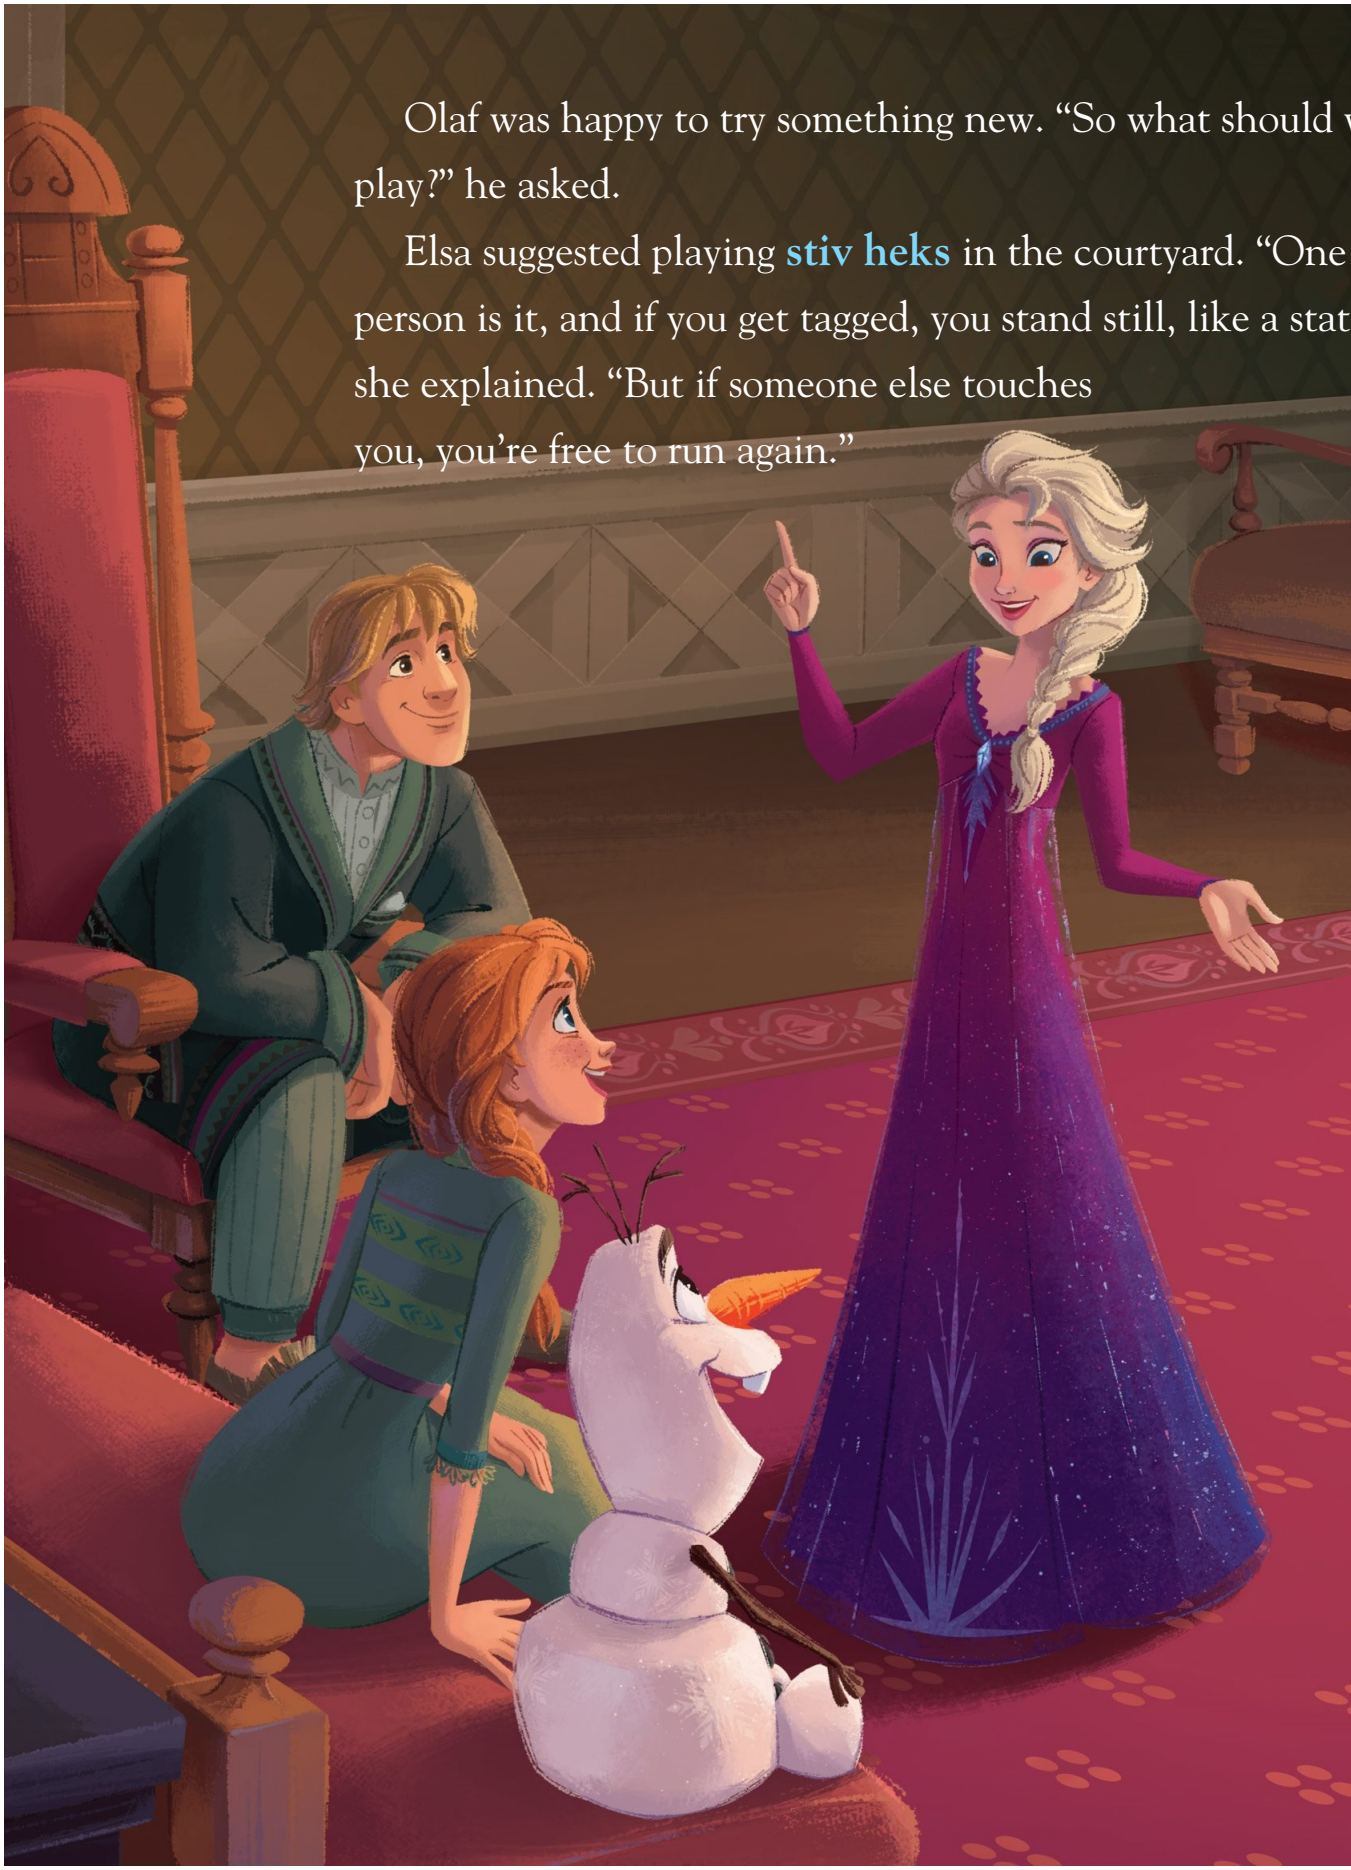
Olaf thought back to all the other times they played charades and realized his team always won! "It's too easy for me to win?" he asked.

"Exactly," Elsa said, relieved.



Olaf was happy to try something new. "So what should play?" he asked.

Elsa suggested playing stiv heks in the courtyard. "One person is it, and if you get tagged, you stand still, like a stat
she explained. "But if someone else touches you, you're free to run again."

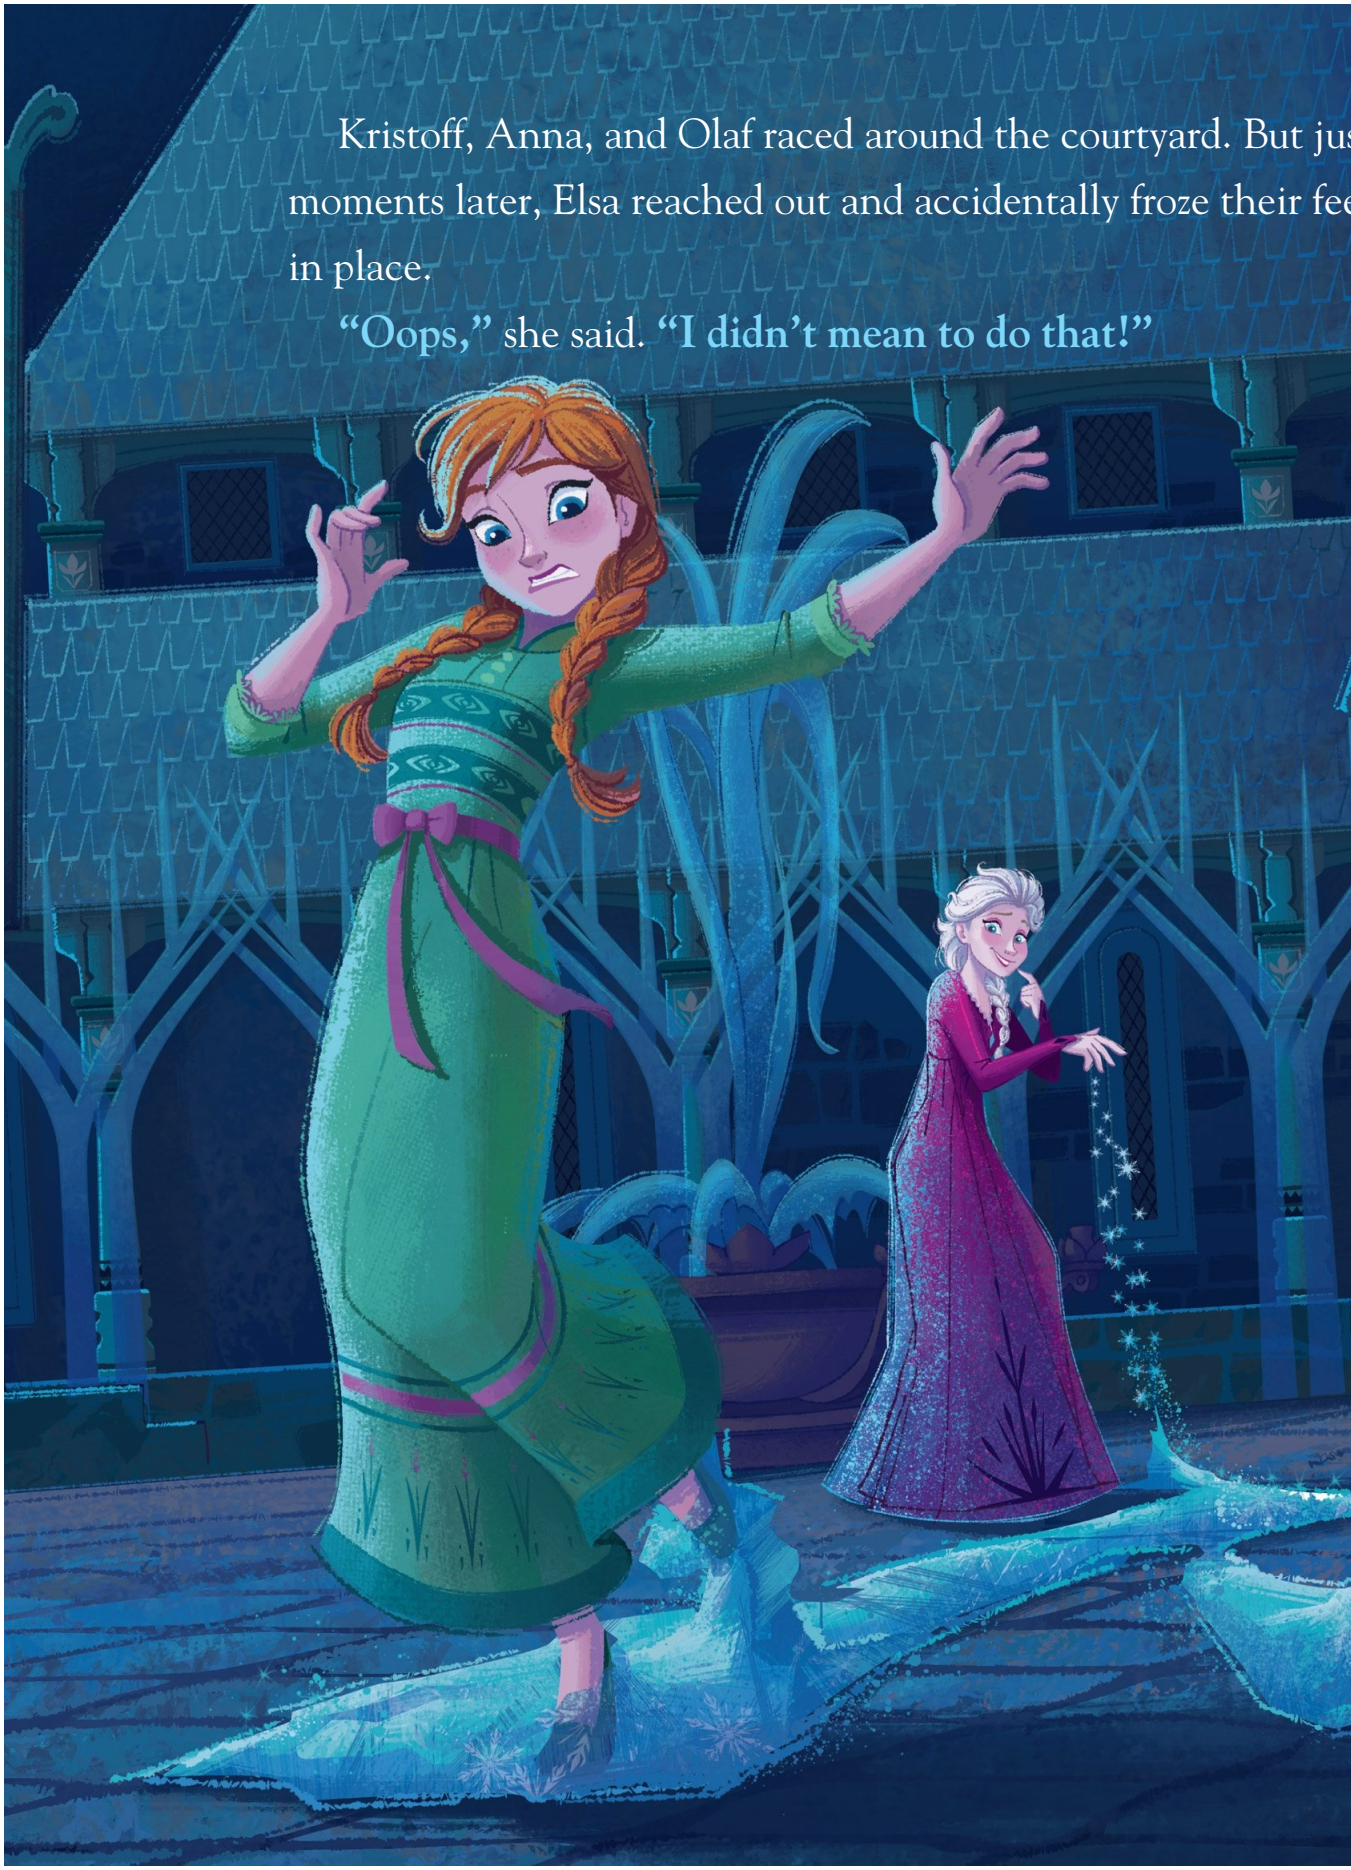
Freeze tag under the stars sounded wonderful.

"Last one down is rotten rakfisk!" shouted Anna, and they raced out of the castle.



Kristoff, Anna, and Olaf raced around the courtyard. But jus moments later, Elsa reached out and accidentally froze their fee in place.

"Oops," she said. "I didn't mean to do that!"

Anna tagged Kristoff, forcing him to stand as still as a statu

When Olaf tried to release Kristoff, she tagged him, too!

Just as Anna was about to tag Elsa, Anna's slippers froze to the g

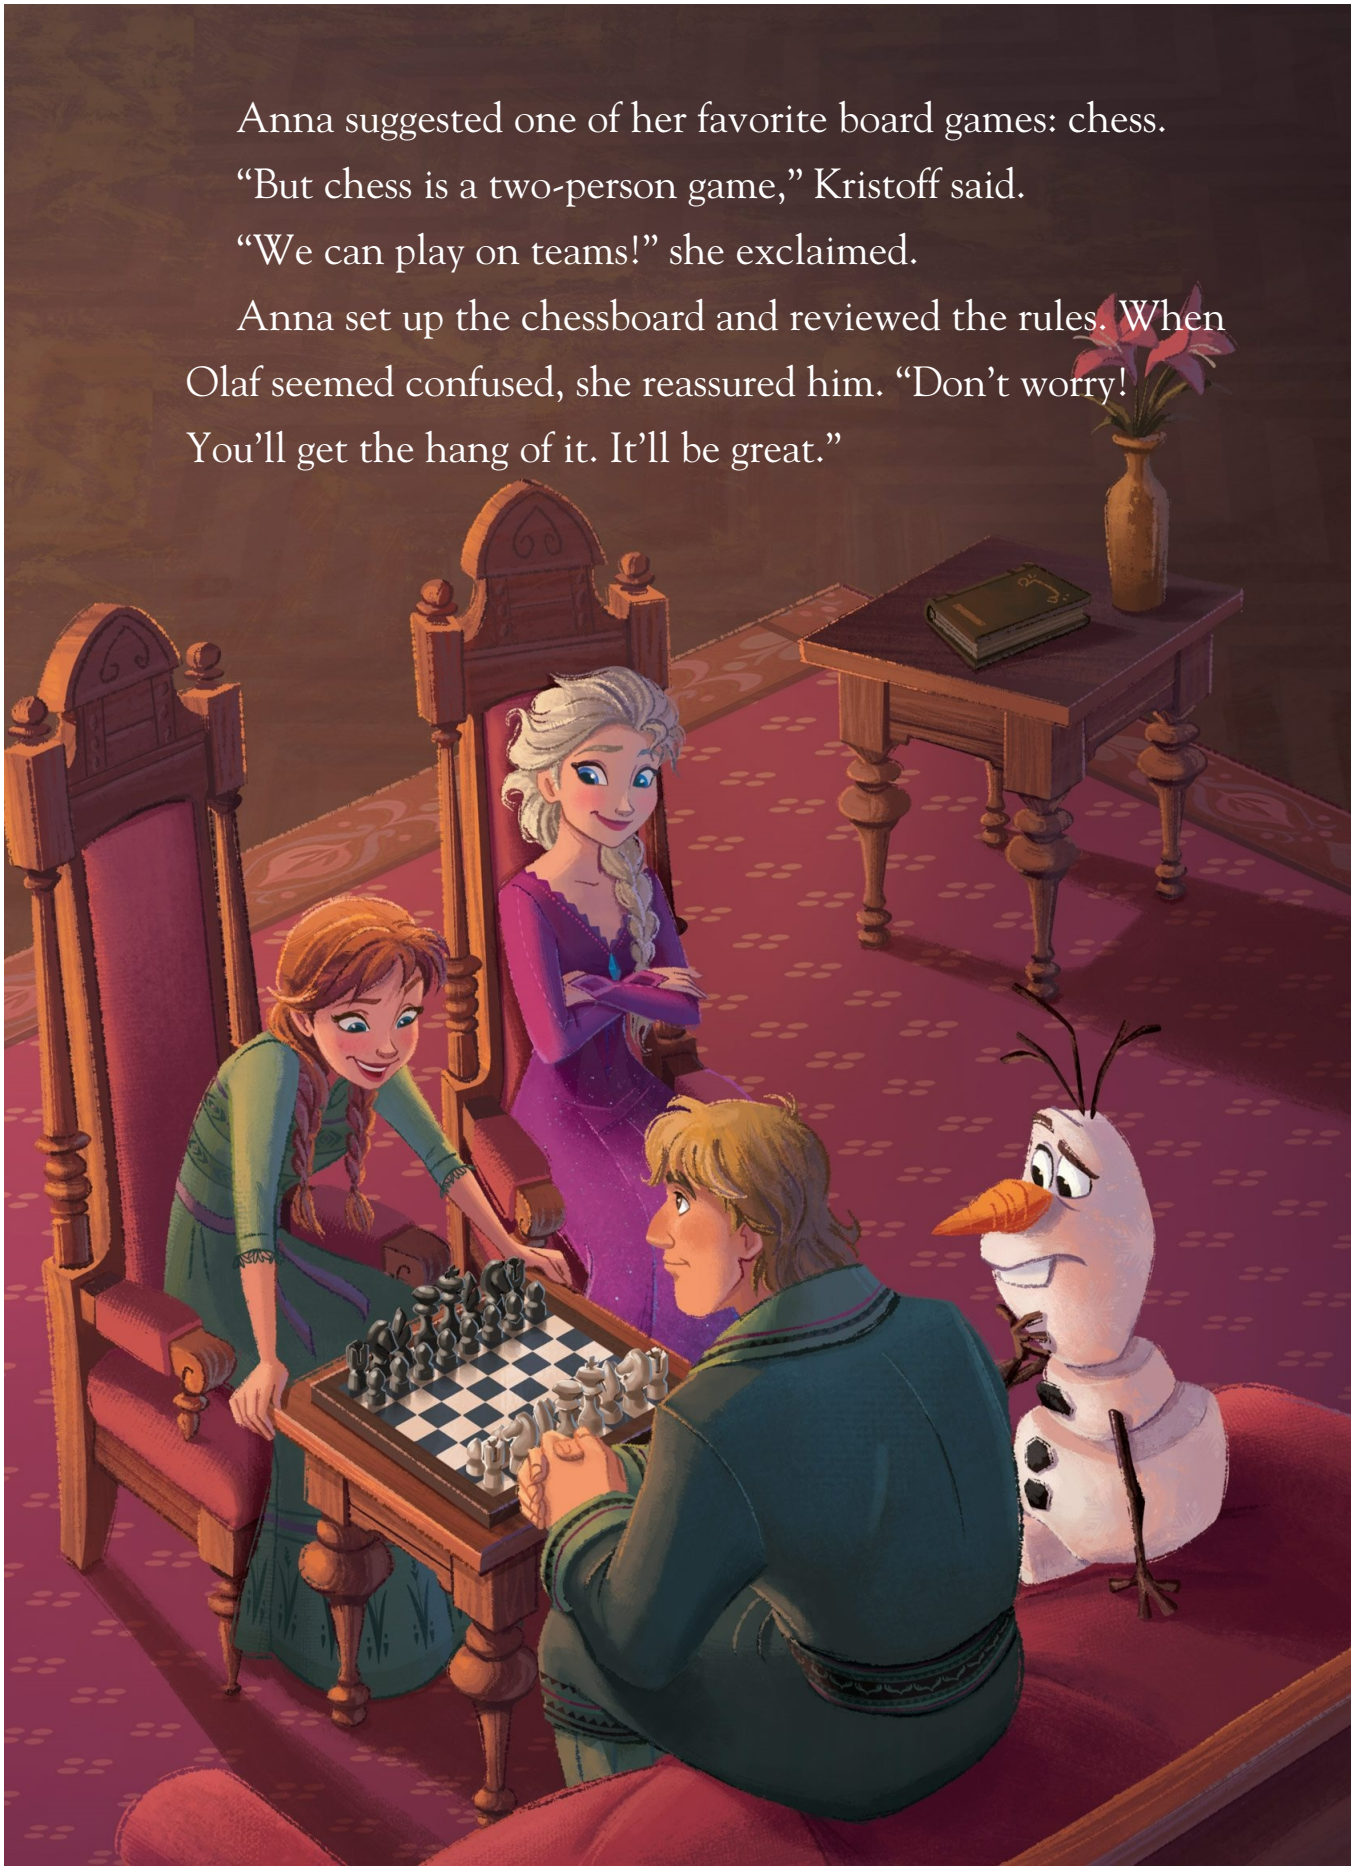
Elsa smiled, embarrassed. "Maybe we should try another game."

Anna suggested one of her favorite board games: chess.

"But chess is a two-person game," Kristoff said.

"We can play on teams!" she exclaimed.

Anna set up the chessboard and reviewed the rules. When Olaf seemed confused, she reassured him. "Don't worry! You'll get the hang of it. It'll be great."



As they played, Anna became more and more enthusiastic. She help interjecting when she saw Kristoff and Olaf make a move.

"Umm . . . why don't you try putting it here instead?" she said. Then she reached over and nudged their piece into an eve position.

Elsa pushed one of her rooks forward three spaces, and Anna flinched. Elsa pulled the rook back to its place, and Anna nodded in approval.

Before long Anna was playing for both sides. Family Game Nigh turned into Watch Anna Play Chess Night.

When she finally realized it, she looked up at them with a small
"I guess I got carried away," she said. "This isn't working, either, is

They turned to Kristoff. It was his turn to pick a game.
"I thought you'd never ask," he said with a smile.

roots and treetops

Anna looked confused. “Wait. What?” she asked. “Nobody w

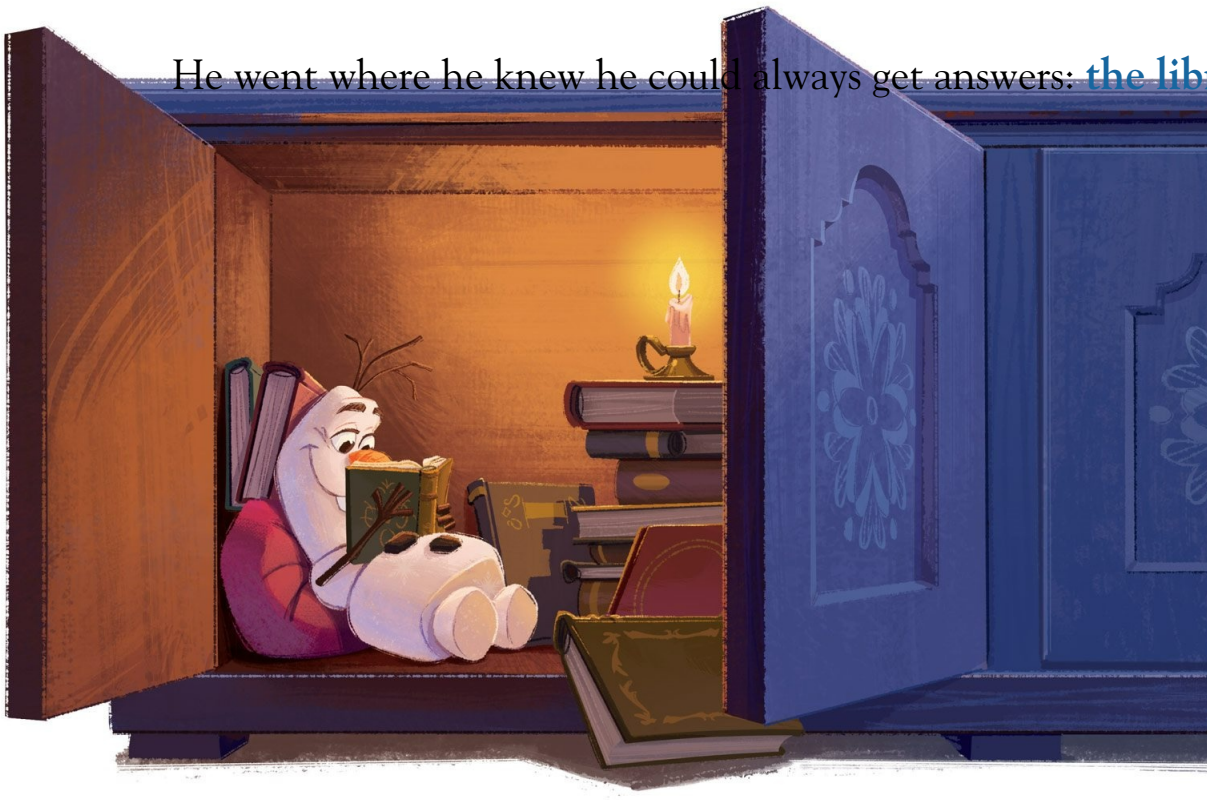
“No, everybody wins!” said Kristoff.

The game required cr
balance, and coordinatio
tried and tried to follow
instructions, but toppled
each and every time.

"What now?" Elsa asked with a shrug.

"Let's think over a snack," said Anna. She, Kristoff, and Elsa went to the kitchen for a quick break. But Olaf had a differ idea. He wandered off in the opposite direction.

He went where he knew he could always get answers: the lib



Olaf gathered a few books and took them to a cozy reading sp determined to find the perfect game.

hide-and-seek

"Oooh!" said Anna excitedly. "We haven't played that in for Elsa laughed. "Great idea, Olaf."

"Ready or not, here we come!" called Anna.

And they began searching through the dark, quiet castle.

looking for the little snowman.

The floors creaked, and shadows appeared on the walls. Playing hide-and-seek at night was eerie and fun!

They peered around corners, behind doors, and under furnitu

There were so many places to look, but there was no Olaf!

Then something strange happened: Elsa was missing!

Anna and Kristoff split up and continued searching the cast
But now they were looking for Olaf and Elsa.

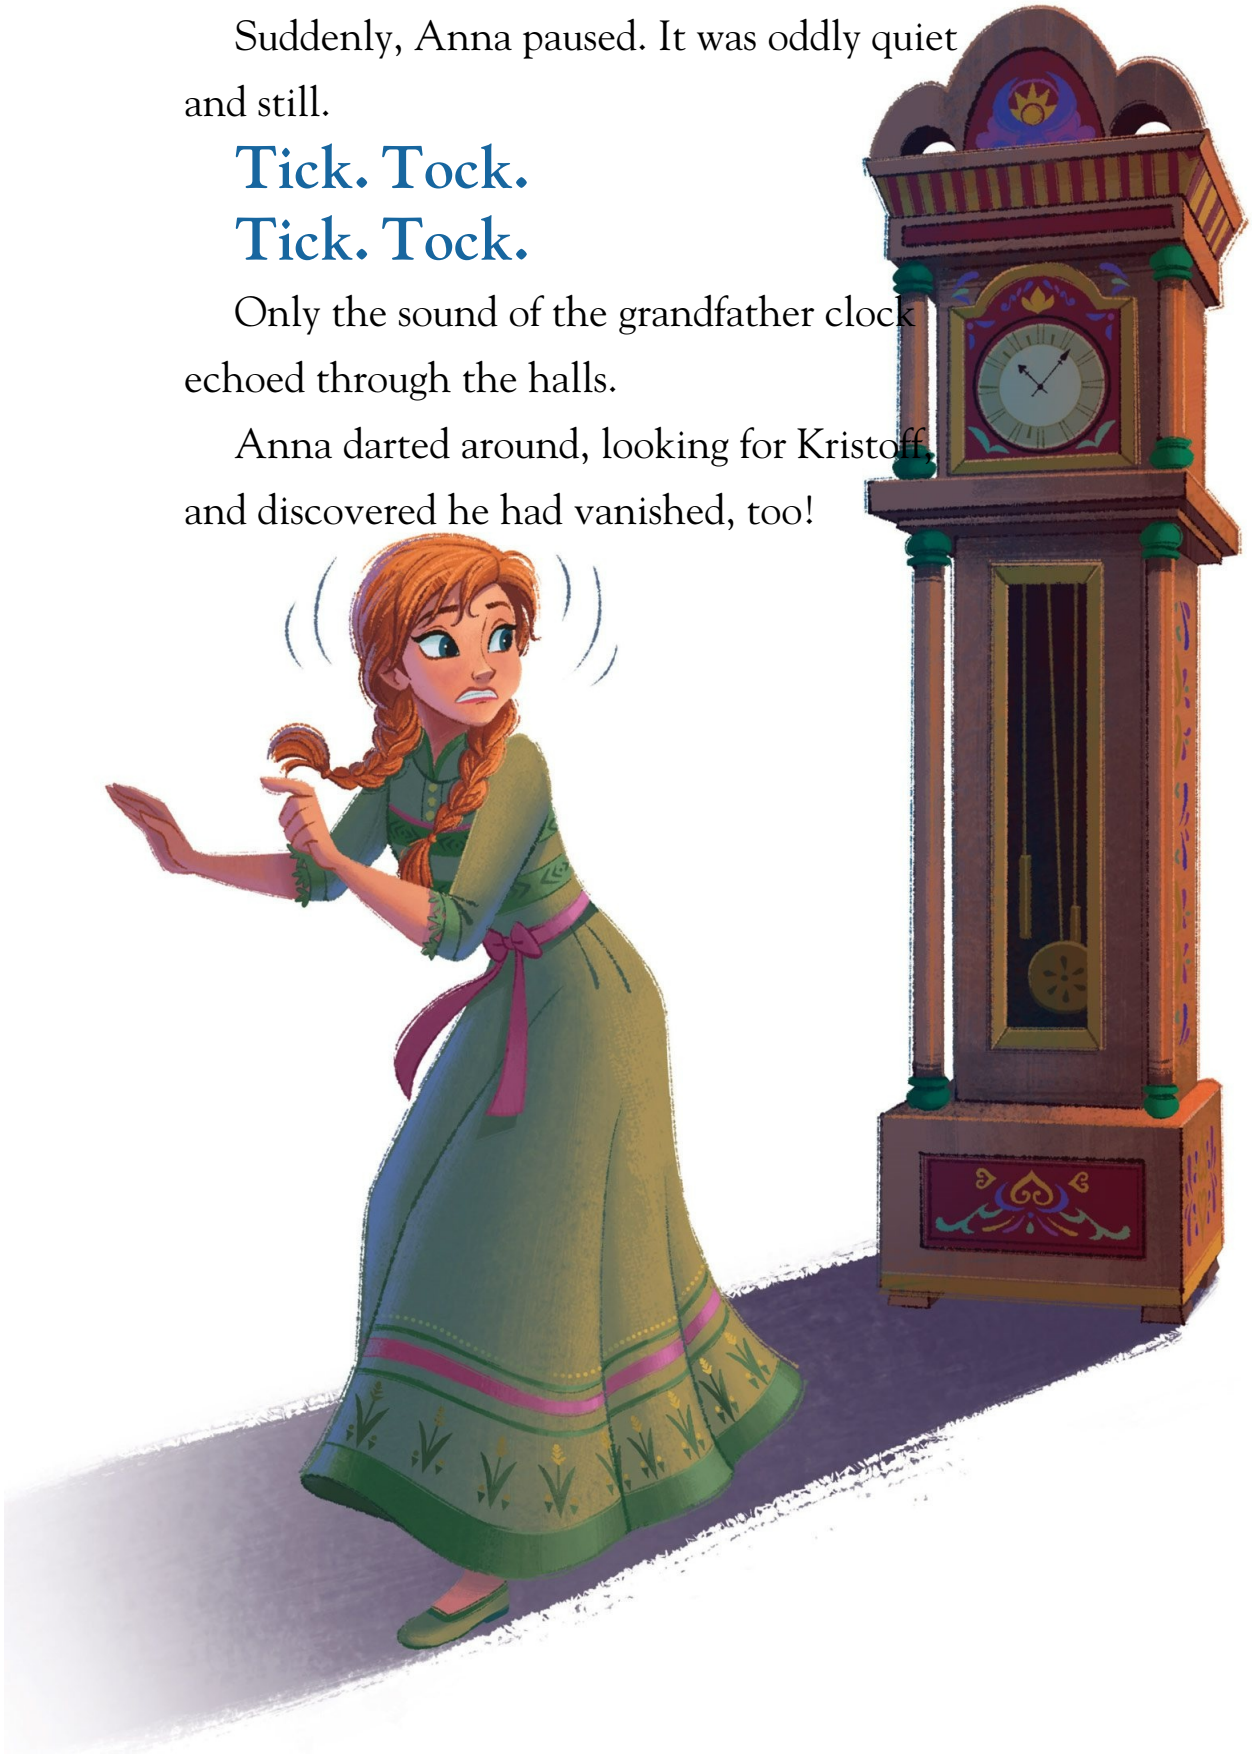
Suddenly, Anna paused. It was oddly quiet and still.

Tick. Tock.
Tick. Tock.

Only the sound of the grandfather clock echoed through the halls.

Anna darted around, looking for Kristoff and discovered he had vanished, too!



. . . everyone was stuffed inside! They laughed as stacks of books poure out of the cabinet.

"Olaf, you rearranged hide-and-seek!" Anna said with a chuckle. "Everyone had to find you! What a fun new game."

"I couldn't have done it without the help of these guys," Olaf said, smiling at his stack of books. "Books are so delightfully distracting."

"I'll hide this time," said Anna. "You guys count." Elsa and K climbed out, ready to play Olaf's reverse hide-and-seek again.
"Oh! I can hide again!" said Olaf as he snuggled down and bu his nose farther into his book. "I still have one more chapter left

Disney PRESS